Globalization is positive. Thanks to advances in <sup>(1)</sup> _____ , a wide range of <sup>(2)</sup> _____ can now be shared around the world. For example, fresh food can be <sup>(3)</sup> _____ from different countries via lorry, plane and ship. Although this makes the <sup>(4)</sup> _____ longer, with more people involved before the <sup>(5)</sup> _____ reaches the customer, there's an amazing variety of fruit and vegetables to choose from. Even if your country doesn't grow kiwis, you can <sup>(6)</sup> _____ them in supermarkets all year round! Companies are now <sup>(7)</sup> _____ ; Coca-Cola is an American company, but it has offices in Argentina, Japan and Spain. Globalization can bring a lot of <sup>(8)</sup> _____ to countries. The trend in <sup>(9)</sup> _____ – when a company gets services from an outside supplier – has been very beneficial for some countries. For example, India is a leader in supplying IT customer services for companies all over the world. Globalization is definitely making the world smaller.
