Avicenna who is better known as Ibn Sina was a physician, astronomer, philosopher and writer during the Islamic Golden Age. He is also considered the father of early modern medicine. Avicenna's most famous book is called The Book of Healing which was used in universities as a medical text until 1650. He also covered other scientific subjects in this book such as astronomy and palaeontology. It is the book that suggests Venus is closer to Earth than the Sun. It also explains how fossils become stony. Avicenna's philosophy was influenced by Aristotle who was a Greek philosopher. He often discussed and criticised Aristotle's views which he sometimes disagreed with.
