

FILL IN THE GAPS WITH THE PROPER GRAMMATICAL FORM

S

As far as you remember, <input type="text"/> you a lie?	TELL
<input type="text"/> people <input type="text"/> you? According to research, more people are lying — and getting away with it.	BELIEVE
Linda White from Manchester is a good example. Linda <input type="text"/> just engaged.	GET
Unfortunately, she doesn't like some of her fiance's friends. They <input type="text"/> every Friday night	MEET
since she <input type="text"/> going out with John but she doesn't get on with them.	START
Linda doesn't want them to come to the engagement party, so she <input type="text"/> to invite them all — but on the wrong day!	DECIDE
People also lie about their careers. Some people <input type="text"/> extra qualifications to their curriculum vitae or exaggerate their experience.	ADD
Robert Pool <input type="text"/> as a retail manager for over three years.	WORK
When he <input type="text"/> the job interview he said that he had a degree of Manager.	HAVE
He <input type="text"/> a degree but his employers believed him.	NOT HAVE
More typically, people tend to lie when they meet someone for the first time. They want to make a good impression, so they lie about how well they can play sport, the places they <input type="text"/> ,	VISIT the things they <input type="text"/> , or the things they own.	DO