When Clark Kent was young, he helped his old parents on the farm and went to a state school in a town called Smallville. He was not a very popular student. His friends don't like / didn't like him very much and left him apart. Clark liked sports because he was very good at them. He can / could run faster than the rest of the students but he was not part of the football school team because everybody thought he was silly.

His father didn't want Clark to show the rest of the students that he had / have amazing powers. That is why nobody knew what Clark could really do.

One day, while he came / was coming back home from school, his father suddenly died. Clark and his mother were very sad.

When Clark was 18, he told his mother "I must / have go to Metropolis and find a real job. I become / am going to become a reporter one day and work for the Daily Planet. Uncle John says / say he can take care of the farm. What do you think, mum?"

"That's a good decision, Clark. You are working / worked a lot here now and you should go / mustn't go to university. You don't have to/ mustn't help on the farm anymore because your uncle can help me. You are brave and I am very happy for you, son," answered his mother.
