

Travelling on business

Fill in the blanks with the following words:

seat upgrade	aisle seat	baggage allowance	security scans	legroom	check in	boarding pass
window seat	weight restriction	hand baggage	missed connections	departure lounge	delayed	excess baggage

According to the Bureau of Statistics, 20% of all flights are by 15 minutes or more.

An keeps you from having to climb over other passengers when you want to stretch your legs in a flight.

British Airways has an astounding fee of £65 for, so make sure you pack only the essential.

If you are earning a lot of miles as a frequent traveler, I would consider using them forinstead of flights.

If you travel with only, you can go straight to the departure lounge to there.

In American Airlines, there is a of 32 kgs at no extra cost.

Make sure you have your and your ID at hand when you are about to board the plane.

More stopovers in a flight mean more chances of delays and

Most people prefer because they can watch the amazing view when the plane takes off.

People are supposed to wait at the while their flight is called.

Tall people find it uncomfortable to travel, as the in airplanes has become smaller and smaller.

The became extremely thorough after the events of 9/11.

The airlines have recently changed theto only one suitcase, so passengers must pack lightly or pay extra to carry additional bags.