I've read your blog about making best friends and I'm not sure I agree that it's always your schoolmates. I mean, you can make new friends everywhere: at school, on holiday or in the gym. What really matters is who you can call a real friend. In my opinion, it's someone you can trust and who'll always help you when you need it. It isn't easy to make friends for life, but they're the important ones, and it's not everyone you just know or hang out with.

4 In his comment John talks about

- A the best way to make new friends.
- B the problems with making new friends.
- C what kind of people are best friends.
