

- Fill in the blanks with the verb in the appropriate tense.

John: Hi, Leslie! How are you?

Leslie: Oh, John! It's nice to see you again. The last time I saw you, you (finish) you PhD.

JOHN: Yes, I was very stressed out. It's been a long time. you still(live) in East London with your parents?

LESLIE: No, I (move) to the West End a long time ago. I (finish) a Master's degree in Marketing last year and now I'm working for an advertising agency in Soho.

JOHN: That's great! you (like) it?

LESLIE: Well, the money isn't bad, and it's a part-time job, so I (have) time for judo.

JOHN: Oh my God! You still do judo? How long you (be) a judoka?

LESLIE: Since I was 5.

JOHN: you ever (win) any competitions?

LESLIE: Well, I (win) a couple of trophies. And next summer I (represent) England in the European Judo Championships.

JOHN: Wow! That 's great!

LESLIE: What about you? What you (do) these days?

JOHN: Not much really. I (finish) a postgraduate course a few weeks ago and now I (look) for a job. I (apply) to more than twenty jobs so far but without any luck.

LESLIE: Don't worry. I'm sure you (find) a job soon.

JOHN: Well, I'm not worried anymore. Yesterday, I (file) an application form when I had a brilliant idea.

LESLIE: What is it?

JOHN: I've decided that I (start) my own business.

LESLIE: That'd be great!

JOHN: Anyway, what you (do) this evening? I (meet) Mark at 7 for a beer and I'm sure he'd love to see you.

LESLIE: Great! I (have) a drink with you.