I've just done my first jump since the accident that nearly killed me just over a year ago. As I was lying in hospital after the accident, I wasn't feeling glad to be alive. Instead, I was wondering how I could possibly live without skydiving again.

It all started one evening after another typical nine-to-five day. I was sitting at home thinking, "There has to be more to life than this," when an advert came on the television. "Try skydiving," it said. The next day, I called my local skydiving centre and booked my first jump. At the end of a day's training, I signed a document to say that I understood I was taking part in an activity that could end in serious injury. At that moment I wondered if I was completely mad.

I will never forget my first jump. Five of us walked to the runway and got into a tiny plane. I was beginning to feel nervous, but the others were chatting and joking, and I started to feel more relaxed. It was a beautiful, cloudless day and the sun was just going down.

We climbed to 11,000 feet, and then the trainer opened the plane door. Suddenly, it was time to jump, and as I pushed myself away from the plane, my mind went blank.

Words cannot describe the rush of adrenalin I experienced while I was free-falling. At 5,500 feet I pulled the cord, and the parachute opened immediately. Suddenly, everything was silent and peaceful. Twice I shouted, "This is absolutely incredible!" It was the most amazing four minutes of my life.

From the first jump, I was hooked. I started spending every free moment I had skydiving. It became my reason for living, and nothing else mattered.

Things were going really well. Then disaster struck on my 1,040th jump. Another skydiver collided with my parachute. I fell and hit the ground at about 30 mph. I broke both legs, my right foot, left elbow, right arm, my nose and my jaw. I lost 10 pints of blood, 19 teeth and 25 pounds of fat. I was lucky to survive.

People who have never experienced skydiving will find it hard to understand that my only motivation to get better was so that I could do it again. All I can say is that for me, skydiving is life, and life is skydiving.
