Sandra Hayek

Salma Hayek Jiménez is a Mexican actress, businesswoman and producer. She was born in Veracruz on 2 September 1966. After living with her aunt for part of her adolescence in the US city of Houston, Salma began studying International Relations in Mexico City, dropping out to try to become an actress. Wanting to try her luck in Hollywood, she landed in Los Angeles in the 1990's and made her first foray into film in the drama 'Mi vida loca' in 1993. The daughter of an opera singer and an oil businessman, Salma Hayek boasts a mixed background. She has Mexican, Spanish and Lebanese blood running through her veins; it is not for nothing that her name, Salma, is of Arab origin. She has also made her mark as a television producer thanks to the series Betty. In 2013 she also produced the animated film The Prophet, and has also participated as a dubbing actress in this genre in El gato con botas, Piratas! and La fiesta de las salchichas. She is currently devoted to her family, she is now 55 years old, she has a 14-year-old daughter named Valentina Paloma Pinault who was born in Los Angeles, California.
