1. 1. Starting class cold can be sold with a small talk (1-2 minute duration) at the very beginning, a fun engaging and energizing warm-up.

new topic introduction after homework check, warm up is just a waste of time

2. Too much “Teacher Talk Time” (Teacher-centered class)

After briefly explaining a topic and giving a few examples, give the students a chance to practice and come up with examples on their own it is not a problem, ss have to develop listening skills, so they can listen to the teacher

3. Not having effective links and connections the main aim is to give new material and check exercises, there's no need for links develop transitions and a more coherent whole. Ask yourself: ‘How can I link these topics together?

4. Complicated and Unclear Instructions you can give English instructions if they don't get it, say it one more time less is more, be clear

5. Not Checking the Understanding of Instructions

why do I need to check if they didn't get it i can repeat it later use double check whether they understand and ask a few students to repeat the instructions back to you

LIVEWORKSHEETS

6. Being a shy teacher - a problem or not?

not a problem if you speak English and have a lesson plan it can be treated as a sign of weakness that students have been known to take advantage of. So have your teaching taped and use expert opinion.

7. Using only a textbook as a source for lesson planning it is not a problem I have to stick to the book and cover all topics use extra resourses in other case your ss will get bored.

8. Talking too fast, using too complicated language

Speak slowly. It may be difficult at first, but it is necessary. Use simple terms and definitions to start

I can repeat but they have to get used to good English

9. Completing your students' sentences for them do it - you are helping them don't do it! Let them answer it with what they know – no matter how broken it may sound

10. Inadequate preparation for class it is ok. I am good at impromptu lessons lesson planning is vital to having a successful class. If you are unprepared for teaching your lesson, whether you don't know the subject material well enough, or don't have the necessary materials on hand, it will be obvious.

LIVEWORKSHEETS