Ireland

I think Ireland is an interesting country because, on the one hand, it appears to be very slow and old-fashioned and, on the other hand, it's a thoroughly modern country. In the countryside, it seems as if nothing has changed in the last hundred years but when you read about Ireland's economy and technology, you realize they are completely up-to-date and doing very well for themselves.

Irish pop groups and singers are famous all over the world. In my opinion the most legendary band is definitely U2. And, of course, Ireland has won the Eurovision Song Contest several times.

They love wearing green in Ireland and they have funny little fairies called leprechauns. They are said to have magical powers and the ability to uncover secrets. What else? There are many redheads in Ireland, I notice. That seems weird for us Estonians. Red hair is exotic in Estonia. Many Estonian girls like to dye their hair red. I think it looks disgusting. But real red hair is OK.

Estonian people often say that we have a lot in common with the Irish. Maybe in a historical sense, it's true. The English ruled the Irish for hundreds of years like the Russians, Germans, Poles, Danes and Swedes ruled us. But I don't know what else we have in common. I mean, most of them are Catholic and Estonians are basically Lutheran, which is almost the same as Protestant.

People often mention the word violence when they talk about Ireland. Ireland became an independent country in 1949 but Northern Ireland remained part of the United Kingdom. The Catholics in Northern Ireland wanted to join the Republic of Ireland but the Protestants opposed it. Fighting, the Troubles, broke out between the two groups in Northern Ireland in the late 1960s and has continued ever since. Most people want peace but it seems that it's not possible to achieve.

Mark the statements as either true (T) or false (F) according to the text.
