Type of vertebrate	What do they live?	Characteristics	What do they eat?	How do they reproduce?
FISH
AMPHIBIANS
REPTILS
BIRDS
MAMMALS

LIVEWORKSHEETS

They live in fresh or salt water

When they are young, they live in water, but when they are adults, they live on land.

They have gills to respire.
They have fins to move through the water.
They have cold blood

They live on land

They have scale or a hard shell.
They have cold blood
They respire with lungs and some of them have tail.
They have four legs and sharp claws.

Some fishes eat plants, and others eat fish, so they can be herbivores, carnivores or onminvores.

They are mostly carnivores because they eat others animals.
Some of them are herbivores.

They reproduce with eggs, because they are oviparous . Sharks are oviparous because eggs are inside them.

They eat plants when they are young.
When they are adults they eat insects.
All amphibians are carnivores

They lay hard eggs on dry land. They are oviparous.

They reproduce with eggs because they are oviparous.

They have warm blood
They have feathers to attract the female and they have two wings.
Their legs are covered in scales and their feet have claws. All have tail
Most bird can fly, and some birds can swim and dive.

They can be herbivores, carnivores or omnivores.

All birds are oviparous.

They use lungs to breathe
They have warm blood
They have teeth
Their bodies are covered with hair of fur.
They have different limbs depending on the species.

They can be herbivores, carnivores or omnivores

They live on land and in the water (sabana, jungle, oceans..)

Almost all mammals are viviparous, they reproduce give birth.
Young mammals feed on their mother´s milk

They live in water and on land.

LIVEWORKSHEETS