Reindeer live in some of the <sup>1</sup> _____ places in Europe, Asia, and North America. In North America, reindeer are called caribou.

Reindeer are herbivores, meaning they eat only <sup>2</sup> _____. They live in groups called herds. Herds of reindeer often travel over <sup>3</sup> _____ distances—walking as much as 5,000 kilometers every year. Male reindeer lose their antlers and then <sup>4</sup> _____ new ones every year. Their antlers grow up to 140 centimeters in length!

Reindeer live in cold places, so how do they stay warm? One way is that their noses warm the cold air before it travels into their bodies. Their bodies also have lots of fur—all the way from their noses to their feet! The fur keeps their bodies <sup>5</sup> _____ against the wind and the cold.
