A famous composer – Bela Bartok

Bela Bartok was born in Hungary in 1881, the son of a director of an agricultural school. He studied at the Conservatory in Budapest and wrote Concerto, The Miraculous Mandarin and the Kossuth Overture which was first performed in 1904 in England. He also wrote the Concerto for Violin for Sir Yehudi Menuhin.

In 1905 he started to travel through Hungary, Slovakia and Romania to study folk music. He made 16,000 recordings of people playing and singing and became very interested in traditional Hungarian instruments and melodies. He was also interested all kinds of folk music. He returned to Budapest in 1908 and worked as a piano teacher at the Hungarian Academy of Music until 1934.

In 1940 he went to live in the United States because he did not agree with Nazism. He worked in the United States as a pianist. He died in 1945, a poor man, but he was a great composer and invented a new musical language. Among his greatest works are the six great string quartets, the opera Bluebeard's Castle (1911) as well as several ballets like The Wooden Prince (1914-1916). His music is still performed and greatly appreciated today.
