McDonald's stirs up battle with Starbucks

by James Quinn

Starbucks' Chief Executive Jim Donald - who has presided over a 50 per cent decline in the retailer's s share price in the last 12 months - is to be replaced by founder and Chairman Howard Schultz.

His appointment comes 10 after a dark 12 months for Starbucks, which has seen it lose out to rivals and McDonald's, who 15 have begun to replicate its success. Schultz is now set to slow the expansion in the US, closing under-20 performing stores in direct response to the slowing North American economy. Instead, he will focus on 55 the company's international 25 plans. using money originally earmarked for US store openings for its with plans to open coffee bars across the United 35 States. McDonald's, until now better known for Big Mac burgers than its beverages, yesterday detailed plans to roll out 40 coffee bars complete with their own 'baristas' in its near-14,000 North American stores.

Although there is no such as Dunkin' Donuts 45 fixed timescale for the rollout, trials are already under way, and it is believed the push could add $1bn a year to McDonald's $21.6bn of of the retailer's growth 50 annual sales. The aim is to compete head-to-head with Starbucks in the everincreasing brewed coffee market.

> trial involves The recruiting 'baristas' - a term made famous by Starbucks - to stores, where espresso machines are displayed at 60 the counter, so allowing customers to actually see the drinks being made. This is in direct contrast to McDonald's traditional 65 approach, where products tend to be made out of sight from the consumer.

McDonald's is also trying to demystify the at times confusing Starbucks approach to coffee, replacing sizes such as 'venti' and 'grande' with a simplistic small, medium and large.

In a direct side-swipe at its coffee-focused rival, it is even going so far as to use the difficulties customers often have in pronouncing words like 'latte' consumer advertising in Kansas City, where one of the trials is taking place.

A McDonald's spokesman told the Daily Telegraph that the push is part of the company's global focus on offering 'great 90 products at great value'. suggesting the price point will be somewhat lower than that of Starbucks. The move follows on from 95 a previous roll-out of its coffee products, and is part of a wider re-imaging of many of its stores.
