We all know how it feels to get angry. Sometimes anger is mild, when you are just irritated with someone. But at other times, A ___, with explosive rages. You start to shout and lose control. Your blood pressure increases, your heart races and you can't think about anything else.

Anger is a normal response to a situation B ___, treated unfairly, let down by others, hurt or rejected. Anger can help you to defend yourself, deal with your problems, but it can also cause them. If you always lose control, people might start to avoid you. Getting angry might make you feel better, in control, but it might also leave you feeling hurt and misunderstood.

So, what can you do about your anger?

Is it that you get angry when people make comments about your work and criticise you? Is it that you get angry when you're frustrated and can't do the things you want? Understanding what makes you angry can help you deal with the problem.

Do you start to shout and feel tense? Do you pace about the room? You need to recognise your own signs before you can change your behaviour.

Try taking a step back and distancing yourself from the situation, both physically and emotionally. Check your breathing and take some deep breaths to slow you down and calm your heartbeat. Try to speak calmly rather than shout. Do some physical exercise C ___ or listen to music. Do whatever helps to calm you down.
