AT THE MARKET

TOM: Come on Anna. Let's go shopping. We need fruit and vegetables.
Now Anna, Can you find me a lemon, and a lime? Lemons are yellow and limes are green.
ANNA: A yellow lemon and a green lime.
TOM: Thanks. Now a big green watermelon, and a brown coconut.
ANNA: Hmm. These?
TOM: Now some grapes.
ANNA: Green grapes or red grapes?
TOM: Green grapes, please, and a mango. The mangoes are in front of the lemons.
ANNA: A mango.
TOM: And a pineapple. They're next to the mangoes.
ANNA: And a pineapple, right. What about these pears?
TOM: OK, two green pears.
Some red tomatoes, and an onion.
ANNA: An onion, mmm!
TOM: No, Anna don't eat it!
Anna: Yuck!

An illustration of a vibrant fruit and vegetable stall. The stall is filled with various produce in wooden crates and bins, many of which are numbered from 1 to 10. The produce includes lemons, limes, watermelons, coconuts, grapes, mangoes, pineapples, pears, tomatoes, and onions. Two children, a boy and a girl, are standing in front of the stall, looking at the produce. The boy is wearing a green shirt and dark pants, and the girl is wearing a yellow shirt and a striped skirt. The background shows a green building and a blue sky. The text of the dialogue is overlaid on the left side of the image.
