Henry Ford

When he turned seventy-one Henry showed up 1 ——— the press wearing two different shoes. 2 ——— about it by reporters, he looked down and, obviously 3 ——— up an answer on the spot, said that he always 4 ——— one old shoe 5 ——— his birthday to remind himself that he 6 ——— poor and might be again. Ford loved his son 7———, but it was the same sort of love as when Edsel was the little boy 8 ———he had been unusually 9 ——— . Henry could not relinquish the role of father, and 10 ——— Edsel tried to find ground he could 11 ——— Henry tried to push him back into dependence, capriciously 12 ——— the decisions Edsel made as president and humiliating him13 ——— . When Edsel learned that yet14 ——— of his orders had been countermanded, his jaw 15 ——— tighten and his features cloud, he would shrug and repeat the only explanation he had for 16 ——— behavior: 'Well, after all, my father built this business. It is his business.'
