

Unit 3: Exercise 10

Read the information. Then choose the correct words or phrases to complete the text.

Using time markers

First, firstly, at first, etc.

- We use firstly / secondly / thirdly / finally, etc. to put a series of events in order: e.g. There are three things you need to do. Firstly, you need to do X. Secondly, you need to do Y. Finally, you need to do Z.
- We can use first (or first of all) instead of firstly: e.g. First (of all), you need to do X.
- We use at first to describe what was true at the beginning, before it changed later: e.g. At first, there were only a few people. But more and more people arrived during the day.
- We can use first between the subject and verb to describe the beginning of a process or the first time something happened: e.g. I first met her when we were students, but we've met many times since then.

At the end / in the end

- We use at the end to describe the last part of an event: e.g. At the end (of the party), everyone went home.
- We use in the end to describe the final (and perhaps unexpected) results: e.g. We were really worried about his illness, but in the end he made a full recovery.

While, during, meanwhile

- After while, we need a clause (subject + verb): e.g. While we were at the meeting, I checked my emails.
- It's also possible to have an -ing clause after while: e.g. While waiting, I checked my emails (= While I was waiting ...).
- After during, we need a noun phrase: e.g. During the meeting, I checked my emails.
- We usually use meanwhile to connect two separate sentences: e.g. He gave a really boring presentation at the meeting. Meanwhile, I checked my emails.

When the robbery of a local museum was reported, nobody paid it much attention.

, it was thought that nothing valuable was missing. However, it was later discovered that some valuable coins were missing.

a recent press conference, an expert was asked what the thieves might do with the coins.

She suggested three possibilities:

, the thieves might try to sell the coins to a collector. This was considered to be rather unlikely, as it would be easy to find the coins.

, they might melt the coins and sell the gold from them. This was also thought to be unlikely, as the gold would be worth a lot less than the coins themselves.

, the coins might be sent abroad for sale in another country.

, the police have released a statement, announcing that they have a good idea who the thieves are. 'We are confident that we will catch them

, even if it takes months, and we will return the coins to the museum.' the statement said.