Emma's diary

Every day after school, Emma wrote in her diary. She sometimes drew little pictures in it, too. After lessons, Emma's friends always said, 'Come and play with us. We're going to the park.' 'No,' said Emma. 'I can't'. She went straight home, took out her diary and wrote about all her school friends. She always carried the diary in the pocket of her bag. Emma's best friend, Katy, asked, 'What do you write about?' 'It's a secret!' Emma answered.

One day, Emma saw her sister, Helen, with Katy in the street. She followed them and listened to them carefully. She could hear them, but they couldn't see her. They talked about lots of interesting things and, that evening, Emma wrote about them in her diary.

The next day, Emma dropped her diary. It fell on the floor under her desk in the classroom. Katy saw Emma's diary there and began to read it. She was angry and went to find Emma in the playground. 'I found your diary,' she said. 'You shouldn't follow people and write about them!'

'I'm sorry, Katy,' said Emma, 'but please read the next page, too.'

It said, 'April 6th – I like Katy very much.'

'I like you, too,' said Katy. 'But please don't follow me like that again.'

And Emma never did.
