It is usually cold and rainy in winter in London and this weather makes Peter's mother moody and upset, so she always wants to go to warm places on holiday. Last Saturday, it was her birthday and Peter's father organized a weekend break to celebrate it. They decided to go to Nice. It's the fifth largest city in the south of France. Everyone in the family was happy but Peter's mother was happier about enjoying some good weather. Nice usually has a mild temperature all year round and it is between 8°C and 14°C during the winter months. On Friday morning, Peter and his family got up early, had their breakfast and took a taxi to the airport. Their plane landed in Nice at 9 o'clock in the morning. The weather wasn't very good. It was very foggy, so it took a long time to arrive at their hotel. When they got to their hotel, it started to rain heavily. They spent all day at the hotel. On Saturday, the weather was worse- it was windy and very cold. They stayed at the hotel again! On Sunday, it snowed in Nice for the first time in 20 years! It hardly ever snows in London, so the snowy weather made them excited and they wanted to play in the snow, but they didn't have any coats or other warm clothes. They only watched the snow through the hotel windows! They came back to London that evening and Peter's aunt met them at the airport. "The weather was fantastic here this weekend! It was warm and sunny every day and we were all out" she said! "How was Nice? Did you enjoy some sunny weather, too?" she asked. They all felt too disappointed and tired to answer that question.
