Listen to a dialogue between a mother and her son about 'From Tea Plants to a Cup of Tea', and complete the text!

Boy : How about a nice cup of tea Mum?

Woman : Oh, that's a good idea, 1._____ tea and eating biscuits.

Boy : By the way, I just wonder how tea goes from plants to a cup.

Woman : Do you really want to know?

Boy : Yes, mum.

Woman : OK, listen to me. First, tea plants are grown in tea 2. _____ in hilly, cool areas.

Boy : I see. That's why we can see many tea plants in such areas.

Woman : You're right. Next, the tea leaves are 3._____ and 4._____ under the sun for about a day until they are almost dry.

Boy : How do they pick the tea leaves?

Woman : Many people work as tea-leaf 5._____.

Boy : It must be very interesting.

Woman : Yes, it is. After that, good quality leaves are selected and sliced finely using a cutting-machine. They are then dried once again. Next, the leaves are put into 6._____, and then 7._____ into boxes. Later, the tea 8._____ are delivered to stores, supermarkets, and perhaps shops near our home.

Boy : Wow, that's quite a long process.

Woman : You're right. You know what? For many years, Indonesia has been a major 9._____ of tea for its own people and for the international trade.

Boy : That's great. So it means that Indonesian tea is exported to international markets?

Woman : Yes. Indeed.

Boy : But still I wonder about all the people who have 10._____ together to produce the tea and bring it to us.
