Can You Imagine Ecuador Without Crime and Dirtiness?

Imagination is something people are capable to control and use to make good or bad decisions. it is true that no place is 100% safe in the world, this doesn't mean crime can't be reduced. Now, the question is how to reduce crime? The first step is to have an idea through imagination and questioning. Using the what-if question when it comes to reducing crime. For example, questions such as:

"What if people reported with no fear to the police?",

"What if people took care of each other on the streets?",

"What if teachers taught their students the terrible consequences of committing a crime?",

"What if parents walked the talk (e.g. not throwing garbage out of the car on the road)",

"What if local people didn't take advantage of tourists by asking them to pay higher prices?",

"What if local people were more united for fighting against crime?", as well as

"What if people got rid of the so called creoles' cunning (la viveza criolla) for the greater good?"

In theory, the more questions, the better. Make sure you use your imagination to make good decisions, and remember the change starts with you!
