My train travels in India

Although my friend, Hardeep, had told me that Indian train stations were usually a bit chaotic, I was absolutely amazed by _____ sight of all the jostling passengers crowding around the departure board. Remembering Hardeep's advice, I bought _____ snack for the journey _____ one of the many food stalls around the concourse. Then I spotted a free space on a bench where I could rest for a moment. As I sat there, I tried _____ to worry that I couldn't understand any of the announcements which _____ echoing from the speakers above my head.

After ten minutes or so, I _____ my way to Platform 5 and waited patiently for my train to arrive. When the train did pull in, it was completely full so _____ we could get on, hundreds of passengers needed to get _____. I had to hold _____ tightly to my luggage as I was pushed back by the great flood of travellers.

Eating habits

There's one famous pop star _____ swears by eating only two meals a day rather than the average of three which most _____ us consume. Basically, his theory is that good health comes _____ restricting your food intake and making sure you eat at the _____ suitable time in your daily routine for your body to benefit fully. In his case, this means eating a sizeable breakfast at around 8.30am and then waiting _____ 5pm to eat your other meal of the day but we may not all be able to organise our day like he does.

For the majority of _____, food is something we fit into our lives _____ than moulding our lives around what and when we eat. The best we can aim _____ is to eat sensibly, which is to say reasonably healthy food in appropriate portions. And if we have a take-away or some fast food, it doesn't _____ to be a cause for concern provided we don't do it on a regular basis.
