

FLASH FLOODS

Eleven year old Kanokwan Joentoenboon usually cycles to school. But today, she walked, holding her backpack above her head, with water up to her waist. This weekend's flash floods have made life very difficult for people in Southern Thailand. Flash floods happen after storms in low-lying areas. Heavy rain started in the south of the country on Saturday night and has not stopped. The weather has affected many towns. Some have no electricity. Shops are shut. Houses have collapsed and more than 20 people have gone to hospital. Farmer Somsak Ornlamai told us, "This is the worst rain I've ever seen. My sister was trapped in her flat! A neighbor rescued her. These floods are terrible for farmers like me, because they destroyed my corn. How will I make money now? Weather experts say the storm will probably continue for another 12 hours. The government's advice is not to make unnecessary journeys. People should also check on their friends and neighbors if they can.
