Celebrating in the Sun

Celebrating the Sun

Many people all over the world celebrate the sun. Sweden is in the north. In winter, nights are long, and days are short. On December 13, people celebrate Lucia Day. It is a festival of lights. People want light on long, dark days!

Girls dress up as Lucia. They wear white dresses and wear a candle wreath on their head. Boys dress up as star boys. They wear white clothes and a white hat. They carry stars on sticks. The children sing songs, and people eat cookies and special sweet buns.

In Sweden, the festival of midsummer happens in June. Days are long, and nights are short. People celebrate the longest day of the year and the start of summer. People decorate their homes with flowers and leaves. Many people wear beautiful costumes to the festival. They dance and sing songs. They eat fish, potatoes, fruit, and other foods. People enjoy the sunlight and can forget about the cold, dark winter.

In the north of Sweden, it never gets dark at midsummer.
