I.EFL.4.11.1. Learners can understand main ideas and some details in short simple online or print texts on familiar subjects, using contextual clues to help identify the most relevant information	3. Read this text and choose the correct option: SPORTS There are many eye-catching sports. One of them is synchronized swimming. On many occasions it seems like an artistic dance show and not a high-performance sport. Here are some interesting facts about this sport: Did you know that synchronized swimmers don't touch the bottom of the pool during a presentation? They compete and train in pools almost 3 meters deep. They wear nose clips or plugs to avoid water getting into their nose when they are underwater. Did you ever ask yourself how they are so synchronized with the music even when they are underwater? Well, that's because they have a portable underwater speaker. These athletes swim and dance through the water so smoothly that it seems like it requires no effort, but in fact synchronized swimming demands a lot of physical strength and muscle control. So next time you watch one of their routines, you will be even more impressed knowing how much effort goes into making each move. 1. There are many _____ sports. a. THE PERFECT PLACE

There are unbelievable stories of criminals. One of them is the story of Donald Eugene Webb, one of the 10 most wanted criminals by the FBI. After looking for him for more than 25 years, the police found him in the least expected place. Webb had been hiding for more than a quarter of a century when the police found him on March 31, 2007. The FBI had extended the investigation period for more than 37 years to find him where nobody imagined, in his own house. Police found Webb's remains buried in the garden of his own home in Massachusetts. It is not known with certainty how old he would be now because he had been registered with two different birth dates. On December 4, 1980, Gregory Adams, head of the police department, arrested Webb during a traffic control. After three weeks the police found that Webb had escaped and left his car in a parking lot. They believed that Webb had returned to Massachusetts. The police found traces of blood in the car so they issued a warrant in December 1980. The question is how a criminal could hide from the FBI, have a normal life while living in his house? According to the FBI, Webb had up to 9 aliases and 6 different "occupations". During the investigation, he worked as a butcher, jeweler, machine technician and even restaurant manager. In all this time, Webb had returned home every day after work. So, it's incomprehensible how the FBI couldn't find him. Although it is a very obvious place, the answer to this enigma was a secret room. When the police searched the house of Webb, they found a closet that gave way to a secret room and there they found a walking stick. Adams' widow wanted to sue Webb's widow for helping a criminal hiding from the police. The walking stick was a proof, because the blood the police had found in Webb's car in 1980 was from when Adams had shot Webb in the leg. Finally, Lillian Webb negotiated to tell the police where the remains of her late husband were.

1. What was Webb's crime?
2. How did Webb's widow avoid going to prison?
3. What does the walking stick have to do with the story?
4. How did Douglas Webb spend those 25 years?
5. If you had to hide somewhere, where would you hide
