Formal letters are characterized by: formal greetings and endings, advanced vocabulary, set phrases, formal linkers, the use of the passive, the use of full forms. Formal letters don't use everyday language, phrasal verbs, short forms or abbreviations.

A CV should contain your personal details, the information about your education and qualifications as well as about the languages you speak, the information about your work experience and personal qualities.

A letter of application, also known as a cover letter, provides additional information on your skills and experience. It says why you are writing, what job you are applying for and where you found the listing. It also gives the information on your relevant skills and experience and on your personal qualities.

Effective application letters explain the reasons for your interest in the specific organization and should persuade the Hiring Manager to select you for an interview.
