Found Art

Today many artists still make art from things they find. Sometimes they use things as they find them, and other times they make changes to the things they find. Sometimes they use junk. The trash from our homes has plenty of metal, plastic, rubber, and cardboard. Artists might use old toys, or objects they find on the beach, or old electrical equipment. The Korean artist, Yong Ho Ji, makes sculptures from old rubber tires. His sculptures are usually of realistic or imaginary animals. Brian Marshall, an American artist, makes sculptures of robots using objects he finds. The artists put it all together to express their thoughts.
