

STUDENTS A

“The Kiss” by Alfred Eisenstaedt

announce celebrate come kiss run see take

When you see this photo, you think that this is a romantic kiss between lovers, but this is not true!

It was August 14, 1945. The news _____ the end of World War II. The crowd of people in the streets _____, and people in uniform were especially excited. One of the sailors _____ along the street grabbing every girl in his way – old or young, attractive or not.

Alfred _____ his famous picture when the sailor _____ an attractive nurse he _____ for the first time. The picture symbolizes the end of a long fight and happiness that _____ with the end of World War II.

“The Eiffel Tower painter” by Marc Ribound

appear become decide invite learn paint paint phone see tell

It was 1953. One day the photographer _____ that some people _____ the Eiffel Tower, and he _____ to take some pictures. He went up and suddenly he _____ the man in the photo. The man _____ without a safety belt more than 300 metres above Paris! The photographer was very nervous because he was sure the painter was going to fall. A few weeks later the photo _____ in Life magazine. It _____ very famous and they made postcards and a poster with it. Later the company that painted the Eiffel Tower _____ Marc and _____ him to dinner. They _____ him that the painter was an acrobat and his name was Zazou.

STUDENTS B

“Lovers at the Bastille” by Willy Ronis argue argue get go live not hear meet remember see stand take take take talk tell try

It was March 1957 and Willy Ronis _____ photographs in Paris. One afternoon he _____ to the Bastille and _____ two lovers on a balcony. They _____ very near each other and _____. He _____ just one photo and they _____ him.

30 years later the photographer _____ the two lovers and they _____ him their story.

When the photographer _____ the photo they _____ actually _____! Henri, the man, _____ every word they _____ about. He _____ to kiss his girlfriend, Marinette, and she didn't want to. But a few months later the couple _____ married and _____ happily together for many years!

“Lunch atop a Skyscraper” by Charles C. Ebbets appear become eat not wear take talk sit

The photo was taken by Charles C. Ebbets on September 29, 1932, during the construction of Rockefeller Center.

Charles Ebbets _____ a picture of 11 construction workers. They _____ and _____ lunch calmly. They _____ 300 metres above New York and _____ any safety belts!

The photo _____ a few days later in the New York Herald Tribune and soon _____ an iconic image.

Although the photo shows real workers, some people think that this moment was staged by the Rockefeller Center to promote its new skyscraper.