A GAME AT HOGWARTS

The competitors walked out onto the pitch to a wave of noise. "And here come the Gryffindors!" yelled Lee Jordan, acting as commentator. "Potter, Bell, Wood and the rest of the team!" Lee's words were met with loud boos from the Slytherin end. "And here come the Slytherins, led by Captain Flint. He's made some changes in the team." "Captains, shake hands!” said Madam Hooch. Flint and Wood approached each other and grasped each other’s hands tightly. It seemed that each was trying to break the other’s fingers.

THE BUSY STATION

A steam engine was waiting. The first few carriages were packed with students, some hanging out of the window to talk to their families, some fighting over seats. Harry pushed his trolley down the platform in search of an empty seat. He pressed on through the crowd until he found an empty compartment near the end of the train. He started to move his suitcase towards the train door. He tried to lift it up the steps but could hardly raise one end and dropped it painfully on his foot. “Want a hand with it?” a red-haired boy asked. “Yes, please. That’s very kind of you,” Harry replied.

The boy spoke to Harry because

- A. Harry had left the trolley on the platform.
- B. he wanted to offer Harry his help with the luggage.
- C. there were no empty seats in the compartment.
