Homework 2/09/21

Reading Homework:

Kristof woke up and found $20.00 and a birthday card from his grandmother on his bedside table. "What's going on?" Kristof thought to himself. "It's not my birthday!"

He took the money downstairs and asked his mom about it. "That's weird," his mo, said. "Nana must have forgotten that your birthday is MAY 24th, not March 24th! She has been getting more forgetful lately. Leave the money with me and I'll give it back to Nana."

Kristof grumpily handed the money to his mom. He had been hoping his mom would let him keep the money so he could buy a new video game. Even though he had to return the money, this mistake his grandmother made had given him a great idea!

He thought through his plan on the bus ride to school. When he got to his classroom, he went straight to his teacher and shouted, "Today's my birthday! I'm 10 years old today!"

His teacher gave him a big smile and said, "Happy Birthday, Kristof! Why don't you get the birthday chair ready?"

Kristof grinned to himself. His teacher had believed his lie. Now he was going to get to sit in the special birthday chair all day, and his friends would have to be extra nice to him. He might even be able to convince the lunchroom monitor to give him a second dessert. "This is going to be the best day ever!" Kristof thought to himself.

Throughout the day, everyone treated him like a king. His best friend gave him a package of dry erase markers that had erasers on the end. During P.E., he got to be the team captain and tell everyone on his basketball team what to do. After lunch, the whole class sang "Happy Birthday" to Kristof, and then he got to sit in the squishy chair during reading time.

Thanks to his grandmother's memory loss, Kristof had a great day.
