

Interviewer: Would you mind giving us a gander at your latest book?

Author: Sure, it's a bit of a suspense and spy thriller in the vein of James Bond.

Interviewer: Forgive me, but I would think that after the Bond series people are tired of spy movies.

Author: Right, many people in 2021 told me that the 2022 movie would fail. But they said the same thing about the last Bond film. Instead, it has flown in the face of expectations and has been a runaway blockbuster.

Interviewer: Can you tell me a custom you used to have to get the creative juices flowing.

Author: You know, that is an interesting question. Different authors have different techniques. Stephen King would spend the day drinking for example!

Interviewer: Yes, and I heard that Hemingway had a habit of fighting. He would participate in a boxing match before writing a big chapter. Everyone has different tendencies when they are young.

Author: Yes, but staying the course with that kind of intense preparation is impossible as we age.

Interviewer: Yes, even when I was younger, I wouldn't want to be drunk or beaten up before I wrote. Would you?

Author: Would I want to get into a boxing match? No, when I was younger, I would usually take a long walk. Often, I would go as far as the next town before I would turn back.

Interviewer: Wow, that's a far cry from Hemingway. It sounds like a very serene preparation process.

Author: Yes! Although, I remember when I made the decision to give the axe to one of my main characters at the end of a book in a fatal car accident. I cried the whole way back.

Interviewer: Well, frankly, I would hope you won't pull something like that in your next book.

Author: Well, you never know!

To do something outrageous	Continuing on	Defied or defeated	In the same genre or style
Let us take a look	Stimulate creativity	Very different

The modal “would” communicates a variety of different ideas.

Try to choose the correct message communicated by the “would” modal in each sentence.

- A. A tendency in the past. (3 times)
- B. A polite request. (1 time)
- C. Reporting in the past what someone predicted previously. (Using “will” in the past.) (1 time)
- D. Offering your opinion in a nice or polite way. (2 times)
- E. A desire preference or desire in the past. (1 time)

1. Would you mind giving us a gander at your latest book? ____
2. Forgive me, but I would think that after the Bond series people are tired of spy movies. ____
3. Right, many people in 2021 told me that the 2022 movie would fail. ____
4. Usually, Hemingway would participate in a boxing match before writing a big chapter, ____
5. when I was younger, I wouldn't want to be drunk or beaten up before I wrote. ____
6. Stephen King would spend the day drinking for example! ____
7. Well, frankly, I would hope you won't pull something like that in your next book. ____
8. Often, I would go as far as the next town before I would turn back. ____