Read the following passage about Cyber Bullying and do the exercises on the next page.

Cyber Bullying

Everyone knows that electronic technology such as mobile phones, computers and tablets has improved communication and entertainment. However, it has also encouraged cyber bullying, which has become a very serious problem nowadays, especially among teenagers.

There are different kinds of cyber bullying. Some young bullies prefer to send rude messages or threats to another young person's email or mobile phone. Other bullies may share personal and private information, pictures or videos about another young person on social networking sites such as Facebook or Twitter. They can also post lies about their victims or keep them out of chat websites. What is worse, some bullies may pretend to be someone else online to hurt another person.

For many reasons, cyber bullying can be worse than traditional bullying. This is because cyber bullies can invade their victims' home through a computer or mobile phone at any time of the day, so they have no way to escape. In addition, because online bullies are often anonymous, the victims can feel more fear as they have no idea who is doing this to them. Finally, nasty messages and images cannot be deleted once they have been posted online; on the contrary, they will always be there for many people to see.

However, just as in traditional bullying, cyber bullying can make its victims lose confidence in themselves or feel alone. This can be very painful because friends are important at this age. A lot of cyber bullying victims may skip school to avoid facing their bullies. As a result, their grades go down as it is difficult for them to concentrate on their studies. Finally, they may decide to take revenge and become bullies themselves.

To sum up, technology may benefit young people, but in order for them to enjoy its benefits, both teenagers and adults should be aware of the problems cyber bullying causes and find ways to fight it.

Read Mary's email to her friend, Jason and do the exercises on the next page.

Dear Jason,

It was great to hear that you found a good job in London. I know you had been looking for one for a long time. As for me, I'd like to tell you that I've changed jobs and that I'm very happy with my new job.

As you know, I used to work as a shop assistant in a clothes shop in the centre of Liverpool. I liked my job and was always very enthusiastic in helping customers choose what was best for them. I also considered myself very lucky to work near my house. The shop was just a thirty-minute walk from where I lived so I used my car only in bad weather. I also liked the fact that I met a lot of people, some of whom became very good friends of mine. The salary I got wasn't that high, but since I was living with my parents and I didn't have a lot of expenses, I never complained about it.

However, six months ago, I decided to live on my own. I couldn't find a cheap apartment near the shop so I rented one 15 kilometres away. That meant that I had to either drive to work or take the bus. I chose to drive to work as I wouldn't have to get up so early to catch the bus. Soon, though, I realised that I had to spend quite a lot on petrol and parking and the money I earned wasn't enough to cover such expenses. So I started taking the bus, which was inconvenient. First, because there was a lot of traffic in the morning, it took more than forty-five minutes to get to the centre and secondly, it was always so crowded that I had to stand the whole trip to work. When I arrived at work, I was already tired. To my boss's disappointment, I resigned and started looking for a job away from the centre. To cut a long story short, after several job applications, I found a job as a receptionist in a big hotel within a walking distance from my apartment. I have a degree in Tourism and I know two foreign languages well. This helped me to get a very good salary and a three-year contract.

I hope you're also satisfied with your work choices. Are you going to have any time off this summer? If so, would you like us to arrange something together? Do write soon and let me know how things are going for you in London.

Talk soon,

Mary
