There is one example.

MICE

Mice are small clever animals that live outside in fields and forests. They live in families, and they have lots of babies. Some mice live in people's houses and hide under the floor. Then, at night they come out to find food. Mice really like cheese and chocolate, but they eat every kind of food. Sometimes they eat books, paper and clothes, too. Mice are not dangerous, but many people are afraid of them. Mice don't like to live where there are cats, because cats try to catch and eat them.
