Treasure restored

Story

About _____year 300 BC, an _____Athenian potter _____a beautiful vase. It _____used for carrying _____or wine in the house _____a wealthy nobleman. _____-passed, and the _____was lost. About 2,000 _____-later, it was discovered _____workers who were harvesting _____in a vineyard. Miraculously the _____-was undamaged, and it was eagerly _____by a merchant _____a very low _____. The merchant _____it away _____him on his _____as he thought he _____sell it for _____ lot of money. Unfortunately _____-the sea voyage _____was a very _____storm and the ship _____wrecked. _____vase, _____with the rest of the ship's contents, sank _____the bottom of the sea. _____year it was found, badly damaged _____covered in seaweed, by _____team of _____exploring the wreck. _____expert _____has painstakingly pieced the fragments _____and the distinctive design _____almost as good _____new. There was a lot _____interest in the vase _____an auction _____months ago and many people bid _____it. The vase _____finally purchased _____£150,000. It ____now _____display in the Greek Pottery Gallery _____the Metropolitan Museum _____New York.

LIVEWORKSHEETS