(56) _____. We now understand the importance of inherited characteristics more than ever before. (57) _____ we are still unable to decide whether an individual's personality and development are more influenced by genetic factors (nature) or by the environment (nurture).

Research, relating to identical twins, has highlighted how significant inherited characteristics can be for an individual's life. (58) _____. It seems that the experiences we have in life are so unpredictable and so powerful, that they can boost or over-ride other influences, and there seems to be plenty of research findings to confirm this.

(59) _____. Instead, the traits we inherit from our parents and the situation and experiences that we encounter in life are constantly interacting. It is the interaction of the two that shapes a person's personality and dictates how that personality develops. If this were not true, we would be able to predict the behavior and character of a person from the moment they were born.

In conclusion, I do not think that either nature or nurture is the major influence on a person, but that both have powerful effects. (60)_____.

- B. And
- C. So
- D. Because

58.

- A. In addition, these characteristics would develop in each individual, irrespective of the situation in which he grows up
- B. But whether these characteristics are able to develop within the personality of an individual surely depends on whether the circumstances allow such a development
- C. These twins are likely to develop similar characteristics similar to those of their biological parents
- D. The environment in which the twins grow up, on the other hand, will deter the development of the inherited characteristics

59.

- A. Consequently, a person is influenced by both nature and nurture
- B. My own view is that there is no one major influence in a person's life
- C. However, it is suggested that parents have the most crucial role in developing a person's traits
- D. If people ask me, I would say I support the view that good personality is reinforced by good parenting and childhood experiences 60.

- A. Whether nurture or nature should be scrutinized depends on the perspective of each parent
- B. Furthermore, these factors are very difficult to control and still leave scientists with many unanswered questions
- C. If we want to raise a good person, we should combine these factors
- D. How these factors interact is still unknown today and they remain largely unpredictable in a person's life
