III. DIRECTIONS. Read the following passage then choose the correct answer. (5 pts.)

If by "suburb" is meant an urban margin that grows more rapidly than its already developed interior, the process of suburbanization began during the emergence of the industrial city in the second quarter of the nineteenth century. Before that period, the city was a small highly compact cluster, in which people moved about on foot and goods were conveyed by horse and cart. But the early factories built in the 1830's and 1840's were located along waterways and near railheads at the edges of cities, and housing was needed for the thousands of people drawn by the prospect of employment. In time, the factories were surrounded by proliferating mill towns of apartments and row houses that abutted the older, main cities. As a defense against this encroachment and to enlarge their tax bases, the cities appropriated their industrial neighbors. In 1854, for example, the city of Philadelphia annexed most of Philadelphia County. Similar municipal maneuvers took place in Chicago and in New York. Indeed, most great cities of the United States achieved such status only by incorporating the communities along their borders.

With the acceleration of industrial growth came acute urban crowding and accompanying social stress conditions that began to approach disastrous proportions when, in 1888, the first commercially successful electric traction line was developed. Within a few years, the horse - drawn trolleys were retired and electric streetcar networks crisscrossed and connected every major urban area, fostering a wave of suburbanization that transformed the compact industrial city into a dispersed metropolis. This first phase of mass - scale suburbanization was reinforced by the simultaneous emergence of the urban middle class whose desires for homeownership in neighborhoods far from the aging inner city were satisfied by the developers of single-family housing tracts.

Team Hoyt

It is almost noon on April 17, 2006—race time! A starter gun fires, and the Boston Marathon begins. This tough, sometimes brutal, race attracts athletes from all over the world. Racers who finish have the honor of saying they survived the 26.2 mile trek. Race winners will take home over half a million dollars of prize money.

The wheelchair racers start first. The crowd gives them a loud cheer. These athletes can't walk. Most have had serious injuries. Still they wheel their high-tech chairs at speeds over 35 mph!

The crowd cheers again. The runners have begun. These are the world's finest distance runners—about 20,000 of them. They come from all 50 states and many foreign countries. The fastest will finish the race in 2 hours and 7 minutes.

The loudest cheers, however, seem to be for Team Hoyt. That's a wheelchair-runner combination. Sixty-five-year-old Dick Hoyt is the runner. His son, 44-year-old Rick Hoyt, is in a wheelchair. Rick can't move the chair himself. A brain injury at birth left him unable to move his arms and legs. So his father pushes him.

This is the Hoyts' 25th Boston Marathon. They never miss a year. By now, the crowd and the officials know them well. One year they ran the course in 2 hours and 40 minutes. Everyone expects another great race from Team Hoyt this year!

The Hoyts Get Started

Back in 1980, it was a different story. That year, the father-and-son team tried to enter their first Boston Marathon. Officials told them no. The Hoyts weren't runners. They weren't really wheelchair racers either. There was no category for them.

That didn't stop the Hoyts. On Marathon day, they showed up at the starting line. The gun sounded, and Dick was off. He pushed his 140-pound son and the 30-pound wheelchair the whole way. Not even Heartbreak Hill, a steep hill along the route, stopped them. The Hoyts were true competitors. The crowd loved it!

How did the Hoyts start running together? Rick first had the idea in 1977. He was in high school then. His school was holding a five-mile race to raise money for an injured athlete. Rick wanted to take part somehow.

Speaking is difficult for Rick, but his mind is sharp. He is able to communicate by typing on a computer with his head. Quickly he typed a question to his father. "Would you push me in my wheelchair in the race?"

At the time, Dick Hoyt was middle-aged. He had never run in a race. He had never heard of anyone pushing a wheelchair in a race either. Still he wanted to enable his son to take part. He would willingly go the extra mile—or miles. "Sure, I'll push you!" he said.

That high school race was a breakthrough. "Dad!" Rick typed. "When we were running, I felt like I wasn't disabled." Dick Hoyt didn't need to hear anymore. Right away, the pair began to train for that first Boston Marathon.

Triathlons and More

The Hoyts don't limit themselves to marathons though. Over the years, they have completed more than 200 triathlons. (In a triathlon, athletes run, swim, and bicycle over 100 miles!) For Dick, that means towing Rick in a boat while swimming. It also means pedaling his bike with Rick on his handlebars.

The Hoyts have taken on other challenges besides distance races. Both Hoyts really enjoy bicycling. So in 1992, they took a long, long ride. Together, they pedaled across the United States on a bicycle-for-two. Their goal was to raise money to build ramps for people with disabilities. Dick has even carried Rick on his back to go mountain climbing!

One More Finish Line

Now the Boston Marathon of 2006 is almost over. Team Hoyt is crossing the finish line in downtown Boston. The crowd roars. The Hoyts haven't disappointed their fans. Dick and Rick have again finished in the top quarter. "No question about it," Rick types afterward. "My dad is the Father of the Century!" They continue to race, not just for themselves, but for others.
