Quito: South America's Cultural Capital

Ecuador's capital, Quito –the first city to be given the status of a UNESCO World Heritage Site– is known as the Cultural Capital of South America. Situated high in the Andean mountains, at an altitude of 2,850m, Quito was built on the foundations of an ancient Incan city, with a colonial center that reflects European and indigenous roots. Among its most outstanding sights are Santo Domingo Church and el Panecillo. In the southern part of the Old Town, Santo Domingo Church stands in the Plaza; its sculptures and paintings are by celebrated Dominican artists, representing fascinating periods in Quito's religious history. The Panecillo provides a panoramic view of the entire city of Quito, and also a statue of the only winged virgin in the world – the Virgin of Quito. From the Panecillo the visitor can see some of the volcanoes of the Andes mountains.
