In 1681, a Spanish merchant ship sank off the coast of Panama. The ship, called Encarnación, sank during a heavy storm. The ship was part of a fleet that traded goods between Spain and the Americas. In 2011, archaeologists were looking for ships owned by Captain Henry Morgan, an English pirate. Instead, however, they found the Encarnación. They were surprised that no one had previously found the wreck because it was submerged in only 12 meters (40 feet) of water. When the ship sank, the lower half of it buried itself into the seabed, so, unlike other wrecks which are often looted, or suffer decay from ocean bacteria, the cargo on board the Encarnación was unusually well preserved.

- 1 What is a merchant ship?
 - a) a ship that carries archaeologists and researchers
 - b) a ship that carries goods and cargo
- 2 Which country owned the Encarnación?
 - a) Spain
 - b) England
- 3 What were archaeologists looking for on their expedition in 2011?
 - a) the Encarnación
 - b) Captain Morgan's ships
- 4 What was surprising about the discovery?
 - a) that the Encarnación sank in only 12 meters (40 feet) of water
 - b) that nobody had already discovered the wreck

- 5 Why was the cargo so well preserved?
- a) because it was buried in the seabed
 - b) because it wasn't buried very deeply

Writing a blog can be a great thing to do. Indeed, you often hear stories of people turning their blog into their career and making a lot of money from it. But those are the minority cases, and the majority of bloggers do it for self-satisfaction and a relatively small following. But, before starting a blog, it's common sense to ensure you're doing it not only correctly, but also safely. Remember, your private details might be discovered, even if you don't use your real name. You might write about something one day and regret it later. Also, you must not write anything in a blog about someone which is untrue. This can land you in a lot of trouble. Finally, remember that anything written online stays online. So, have fun with your blog, but be careful and be safe.
