Sophia lived in the city centre with her family in a flat in a tall building. She could see other enormous skyscrapers, lots of taxis and other noisy traffic in the streets from her window.

She didn't like that view and that noise, they made her feel unhappy sometimes.

She asked her mother: 'Why must we live in the city? I want to live in a quiet place in the countryside'.

'Because my job is here, Sophia. And your school is here, too. But we can go for a picnic in the countryside this weekend.' said her mother. 'Would you like that?'

'Yes, of course, Mum,' Sophia laughed.

That weekend, Sophia went camping with her parents for the first time. She was so excited. They didn't arrive until midnight. It was quiet and Sophia couldn't see anything around because it was so dark. They put up their tent and went to sleep.

Sophia woke up early the next morning. There were so many unusual sounds outside. She could hear birds that were singing in all kinds of different tunes. And she could also hear the water outside, it sounded much noisier than a river. She opened up the tent quietly and stood up slowly to see where they were. She saw a lovely waterfall between some big trees, only a little way away from their tent. "What a beautiful view and that's such a wonderful sound," Sophia whispered to herself.
