ROBIN MURPHY Disaster Roboticist

Robin Murphy is the director of the Center for Robot-Assisted Search and Rescue and the Center for Emergency Informatics at Texas A&M University. In 2014, she was awarded the ACM Eugene L. Lawler Award for Humanitarian Contributions within Computer Science and Informatics.

Robin Murphy imagines how robots can do things no human could on the scenes of disasters from hurricanes to terrorist attacks. In her recent book, Disaster Robotics, she explains her research, which brings together artificial intelligence, robotics, and human–robot interaction.
