BEOWULF, THE HERO

This story, BEOWULF, is an epic poem which is a long poem about a brave hero's deeds.

Old King Hrothgar of Denmark enjoys a prosperous and successful reign. He builds a great hall, called Heorot, where his warriors spend long hours drinking and singing. They like to listen to stories sung by the Scops who are poets.

But the euphoric noise from Heorot hall angers Grendel, a horrible demon that lives in a lake near Hrothgar's kingdom. Grendel terrorizes the Danes, killing them every night. The Danes suffer many years of fear, danger, and death at the hands of Grendel.

One day, this bad news arrives to Geatland where a brave warrior called Beowulf lives. He hears about this wicked monster. Then he sails to Denmark with a small company of men, to defeat Grendel.

Beowulf and his warriors are received by King Hrothgar with a great feast. During the welcome party, the terrible Grendel arrives. Beowulf fights him, showing his strength to the demon. As Grendel tries to escape, Beowulf tears the monster's arm off. Mortally wounded, Grendel walks back into the marsh to die.

Overjoyed, Hrothgar gives Beowulf gifts and treasure at a feast in his honor. The warriors sing songs in praise of Beowulf, and the celebration lasts late into the night.

But another danger is approaching. Grendel's mother, an ugly witch, comes to Heorot seeking revenge for her son's death. She murders Aeschere, one of Hrothgar's warriors.

Then, the warriors travel to a dark swamp, where Beowulf dives into the water in order to fight Grendel's mother in her underwater lair.

Next, Beowulf jumps like a tiger and decapitates her with his magic sword called Hrunting, and brings her head as a prize to Hrothgar.
