

CONVERSATION 1 [M = Korean, F = Turkish]

M: Ms. Yilmaz? I'm Dr. Lee. I understand you're here on business.

F: That's right. I'm from Turkey, actually.

M: And you're not1?

F: No, I'm afraid not. My back has been2 me for several days now.

M: Are you taking anything?

F: Just some3. But they're not really helping.

M: Let me give you a4... for a stronger painkiller.

I think you might find it very helpful.

F: Does it have any5?

M: Well, for very few patients it causes nausea or vomiting. But that's very rare.

I really don't think you'll have to worry. Call me if you feel at all nauseous, OK?

F: OK. Thanks.

M: The6 is one tablet in the morning, one in the evening, with food.

The pharmacist will give you a full set of instructions when you pick up your prescription.

F: Thank you, Dr. Lee

CONVERSATION 2 [M = Japanese, F = Spanish]

M: Lucy Fernandez? I'm Dr. Hirano.

F: Thanks so much for7.

M: My pleasure. Where are you from?

F: Mexico. I'm here on business.

M: You're a long way from home! What can I do for you today?

F: Well, I've got a splitting8, and I've been kind of nauseous since Monday.

M: You must feel terrible. Are you currently taking any9?

F: I've been taking10.

M: Are you allergic to any medications?

F: I think I might be allergic to penicillin. But I'm not sure.

M: Well, that's OK. Keep taking the painkiller for that headache. But you can stop taking the antacid. I'm going to give you a prescription for your nausea.11.

F: Will there be any side effects?

M: It might make you a little tired during the day. But chances are you'll be fine.

Call me if you don't feel better.

CONVERSATION 3 [M = Chinese]

M: Dr. Benson? Hi, I'm Mark Goh.

F: Hello, Mr. Goh. I hear you're not from around here.

M: Right. I'm visiting from Hong Kong for a few weeks.

F: You've come a long way to see a doctor! Well, what can I do for you today?

M: My eyes have been really red for about a week now.

F:12?

M: Well, I got some13 at the drugstore, but they aren't helping.

F: For your condition, I think you might want something stronger. I'm going to give you a prescription for an14. Use it twice a day, and wash your eyes several times a day.

M: OK.

F: It's a strong medication, but there aren't any side effects you need to worry about. If you keep your eyes clean, the ointment should15.

M: Thanks.

F: Will you still be here next week? I'd like you to come back to see me.

M: Yes, I'll still be here.

F: Good. You can make an appointment at the front desk on your way out.

M: Thanks, Doctor.
