When she fell from the sky

ON CHRISTMAS EVE 1971, 17-year-old Juliane Köpcke boarded a plane in Peru to spend Christmas with her father, who worked in a different city. She was with her mother.

5 Half an hour after take-off from Lima airport, their plane flew into a thunderstorm over the Amazon jungle. It was raining heavily and there was a strong wind. And then, suddenly, lightning hit the plane and it exploded.

10 One moment Juliane was sitting next to the window and then she was in the air. She fell head first 3,000 metres in her seat and hit the trees hard. She was unconscious for a few hours. When she woke up the next morning, she was on the forest floor and she couldn't find her glasses. She was alive, but she was alone and the only food she had was some sweets that she found at the crash. While she was in the jungle, she saw some fruit on the trees, but she didn't 20 eat it – she knew it was too dangerous.

Luckily, Juliane's father was a biologist and he taught her how to survive in the jungle when she was young. Juliane looked for other survivors, but she couldn't find anyone. Then she saw a small river, so she started to walk slowly along it. 25 'If I follow the river, I'll find people,' she thought. Her right shoulder hurt badly and it was very hot, but the river kept her cool, and it also gave her water to drink. Sometimes she had to swim because the river was too deep to walk in. 30 There were crocodiles in the water and jaguars, scorpions and poisonous snakes in the trees, but they didn't attack her.

At night Juliane stopped to sleep because it was too dark to walk. She walked for ten days 35 before she saw a small boat on the river. She found a hut and went in, but it was empty. Later that day, three men found her there. They cleaned her cuts carefully, and the next day, they took her down the river and put her on a plane, 40 which took her safely to her father.

Juliane was the only person who survived the plane crash. Her story travelled around the world. The film director, Werner Herzog, had a ticket to travel on the same plane, but he missed it. Thirty 45 years later, he made a film, Wings of Hope, about Juliane's incredible adventure. In 2013, Juliane wrote a book, When I Fell From The Sky.
