

prophet Adam (AS) story

Satan's intention was to deceive Adam and Eve and lure them into violating the prohibition legislated by Allah. Satan's manipulative plan of deception was to poison their minds by placing desires in their hearts. His approach utilized subtle trickery, rather than him being straightforward in advising them to eat from the forbidden tree.

Allah says in Surah al-A'raaf that Iblees whispered to them and told them that their Lord only prohibited them from the trees so that they wouldn't become angels or immortal.

They fall into Satan's trap and repent to Allah

Adam and Eve ate from the prohibited tree, and as a result, their private parts became exposed. They were overcome with shame and sought to clothe themselves using leaves from Paradise. Allah then reprimanded them, upon which they turned to Him in sincere repentance and begged for His forgiveness. They were then made to descend to earth, where they and all their descendants would live and die, prior to the Afterlife.

A lengthy description of this is in Surah al-A'raaf. Iblees deceived Adam and Eve and they ate from the tree. Then, their private parts were exposed and they began to try to cover themselves with leaves from the tree. Allah called out to them and repeated that He told them that Satan was a clear enemy. They repented to Allah. Allah then told them to descend to this world where they would settle and enjoy themselves for a while. Humans would live and die there.

Allah had mercy on both of them and forgave their sin. There is no concept of original sin in Islam, and we aren't responsible for the deeds of our ancestors. One is only held accountable for one's own deeds.

The Story of Abel and Cain (Habil and Qabil)

The story of Abel and Cain is popular in various traditions. Allah also mentioned the story in the Quran in Surah al-Maidah, describing the difference between the two brothers and the outcome of their attitudes. Cain was the elder son of Adam and Eve, popularly known as Qabil in Islam. Abel was the younger son, who Muslims know as Habil.

When Allah revealed information about this story, He commanded the Prophet (PBUH) to recite the story, proclaiming it to be the ultimate truth. That is a given, considering that the Quran is the book of ultimate truth directly from Allah.

Both Habil and Qabil presented a sacrifice to Allah. However, Allah only accepted the sacrifice from the younger son, Habil. That was because Habil was a righteous person and had a firm belief in Allah. That didn't apply to Qabil. As a result of this incident, Qabil taunted Habil and threatened to kill him.

Habil showed his God-fearing nature in his response, warning Qabil that carrying out his threat would only increase the weight of his sins in Allah's eyes. Meanwhile, he said that Allah would forgive his sins if he suffered injustice. He expressed his fear of Allah.

Qabil, however, was completely consumed by his arrogance and jealousy. He killed Habil and committed a grave sin. This was the first instance of a righteous human being murdered by another. After this incident, Allah sent a crow toward the place where it happened. It began to show Qabil what to do with the body of his brother by burying it. Seeing this, he began to realize his errors. Allah says in the Quran that Adam's son

"became of the regretful."
