Beverly Bunn was born in McMinnville, Oregon, on April 12, 1916. She moved to Portland with her family when she was six. When Beverly was a child, she found it difficult to learn reading. But with the help of her mother, she learned to read in 1924. She developed a great love for reading and often visited the local library.

In 1940, Beverly married Clarence Cleary. She decided to become a full-time writer after working as a librarian in the 1940s. Her books are about children and their adventures — subjects she liked reading about when she was a child. Cleary published her first book, Henry Huggins, in 1950. Since then she has published more than 35 books. Her books are published in many different languages. She has won the Newbury Medal three times. The Newbury is a prize for excellent books for children.
