Strike!

The backbone of any TV show or movie is the writing. When writers' strike, it affects everyone because it means there will be no new shows for a long time.

What is a strike? A strike is type of protest in which a group of workers all stop working at the same time. Workers may strike for many reasons. One of the most common is money. A strike can last days, weeks, or even months.

Companies don't just fire the people who go on strike and replace them with new workers because laws protect the workers. A skilled field like writing, finding replacements often isn't possible. So, when a writers' strike occurs, everyone ends up watching a lot of reruns because there's no one to write new shows. Without film and TV writers, life gets pretty dull. Many people end up reading to pass the time, so I guess a writer's strike isn't such a bad thing!
