Read the text. Then answer questions 6 to 8.

Natural disasters are impossible to prevent. One natural disaster can sweep away an entire town or city. One such place was Pompeii. The city of Pompeii was in ancient Rome, and now it has become one of the most popular tourist attractions. The reason it became so famous is the volcanic eruption of Mount Vesuvius. The city, once known as the vacation spot for the noble, was buried under ashes for 2,000 years, taking more than 2,000 lives. It is so ironic that the only reason the city was well preserved after thousands of years is the volcanic ash that killed so many. Pompeii is one of the historical sites that shows what ancient Rome was like, but it also shows the tragedy that cost thousands of people's lives.
