

Department of Intellectual & Developmental Disabilities

Listen:

The Department of Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities (DIDD) is the state agency responsible for oversight of services and support to Tennesseans with intellectual and developmental disabilities. DIDD partners with people, families, community-based providers, advocates, and others to ensure people with disabilities are supported to live the lives they envision for themselves.

DIDD provides services and supports to both children and adults in a variety of ways. These include supports through the Home and Community Based Waivers, the Tennessee Early Intervention System (TEIS), the Katie Beckett Program, the Family Support Program, and other programs. It aims to provide an array of services that support people and families to reach their optimal development and prepare them for independence, employment, and community engagement.

The department supports all Tennesseans with intellectual and developmental disabilities to live the lives they envision for themselves by ensuring people are free to exercise rights, engage with their broader communities and experience optimal health. DIDD is the first state service delivery system in the nation to receive Person-Centered Excellence Accreditation from the Council on Quality and Leadership. It has also been recognized as a national leader in its efforts to increase competitive, community-based employment outcomes for people with disabilities and its commitment to enhancing independence through Enabling Technology.

Directions: Fill in the blank

_____ is the state agency responsible for oversight of services and support to Tennesseans with intellectual and developmental disabilities. DIDD partners with people, families, _____, advocates, and others to ensure people with disabilities are supported to live the lives they envision for themselves.

DIDD provides services and supports to both _____ and _____ in a variety of ways. These include _____ through the Home and Community Based Waivers, the Tennessee Early Intervention System (TEIS), the Katie Beckett Program, the Family Support Program, and other programs. It aims to provide an array of _____ that support people and families to reach their optimal _____ and prepare them for _____, employment, and community engagement.

The department supports all _____ with intellectual and developmental _____ to live the lives they envision for themselves by ensuring people are free to exercise _____, engage with their broader _____ and experience optimal _____. DIDD is the first _____ service delivery system in the nation to receive Person-Centered Excellence _____ from the Council on Quality and _____. It has also been recognized as a _____ leader in its efforts to increase competitive, _____ for people with disabilities and its commitment to enhancing _____ through Enabling _____.